NEWS THIS WEEK SO FAR (Friday)

UNITED STATES American scientists have launched the Agena target rocket which is being used for a planned link-up in space with a manned Gemini space-craft. The two astronauts, James Lovell and Edwin Aldrind, are waiting in their capsule for blast-off, due soon. They will try to link up with the target rocket after a 75,000 mile chase. During the four day flight, the last of the Gemini series, Aldrind hopes to make a two hour walk in space and take pictures of the earth and stars. The launchings at Cape Kennedy are being watched by representatives of two communist countries, Poland and Roumania.

RHODESIA. On the first anniversary of the Rhodesian seizure of independance, Mr. Ian Smith has said that the time has now come for man to man talks about the question. With good will from the British government he believed the gap with Rhodesia could be bridged. Mr. Smith said that no-one could doubt that Rhodesia was now firmly and irrevocably entrenched in her independance. If there could be no agreement with Britain, then Rhodesia would have to turn away towards the rest of the world. It is understood that Mr. Smith has not approached the British government for a meeting with Mr. Wilson. Mr. Smith's mention of man to man talks is regarded in London as essentially a political gesture to his Rhodesian audience.

ZAMBIA About 200 students, some of them white, demonstrated outside the British High Commission over the Handling of the Rhodesian question. They later handed in a petition.

CHINA The Red Guard youth movement staged their second mammoth rally in Peking today. Nearly a million people are estimated to have taken part. Posters havebeen put up demanding the punishment of a group of Red Guards accused of injuring 20 chinese soldiers in a recent clash. A correspondent says the so-called cultural revolution is beginning to look more and more like a movement which is out of hand. Even the communist party leadership may be getting alarmed at the Red Guards' excesses.

VIETNAM. About 24,000 American troops are now engaged in an operation near the Cambodian border designed to prevent a major offensive by the Vietcong. The operation is the biggest of its kind in the Vietnam war. The North Vietnamese say they have shot down five US aircraft during raids on the North; they say seven american airmen were captured.

The Prime Minister of South Vietnam has announced that four of the seven ministers in his government who recently threatened to resign have changed their minds and will remain in office. The other three are leaving, because they say there is regional discrimination in filling official posts.

CANADA. The Canadian Foreign Minister, Mr. Maptin, has ended his talks with Soviet leaders. He told a news comference in Moscow that both countries want to reduce international tension, but, he said, Russia does not share Canada's enthusiasm for giving the International Control Commission in Vietnam a new peace-seeking role.

INDIA. More than a hundred Hindu holy men and their followers were arrested when they tried to stage another demonstration in Delhi in support of a ban on the slaughter of cows. All public meetings in Delhi were banned after Monday's Hindu riots, in which eight people were killed.

BERMUDA. The conference on constitutional advance for Bermuda has had another meeting in London. The Foreign Secretary and the Bermudan representatives discussed future electoral procedures for the colony, including constituency boundaries. The aim of the talks is said to be to produce a 'durable, modern, constitution for the island.'

GHANA. The former Ghanaian High Commissioner in London, Mr. Ama, who was committed to prison by a London magistrate earlier this week, has been granted bail. Mr. Ama, who held the post under the regime of Dr. Nkrumah, is the subject of an application by the Ghana government for his return to Ghana to face a charge of stealing £30,000. He denies the charge.

SPAIN. Police broke up a street demonstration by about 300 students at Barcelona University who are campaigning for official recognition of their independent Student's Union. Earlier, about 1,000 students held a meeting to protest against the recent arrest of some of their colleagues.

UNITED STATES (again!) A goods train carrying a poisonous type of gas left the rails and crashed into oil storage tanks in a small town in Michigan. It started a big fire, and almost the whole population of the town, about 2½ thousand people, were evacuated as fears grew that the gas might be seeping out of its containers.

Saturday's newsEadditions

CHINA A report from Peking says that the diplomatic representatives of seven communist countries walked out of a meeting addressed by the Chinese Prime Minister Chou en Lai. Those of Albania, Roumania, and Yugoslavia remained in their seats. The others, led by Soviet diplomats, left the meeting when Chou en Lai accused the Soviet leaders of 'betraying Lenin and the Bolshevik revolution'. He accused the Russians of restoring Capitalism in the communist world, and of protecting the interests of the Imperialists. The meeting was held to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Sun Yat Sen, the founder of the Chinese republic.

The East European delegation staged a similar walk-out at last month's celebration in Peking to mark EEE seventeen years of communist rule.

Last week a Chinese diplomat left the big military parade in Moscow, on the anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution, after an attack on China by the Soviet Defence Minister.

SPACE (We haven't a place to mark this on the front cover!) The two american astronauts now circling the earth in Gemini 12, have successfully linked up with their Agena target rocket. They manoevred their space craft to within close range of the rocket, and then found that the automatic steering was not working, so they flew and steered it manually. Another snag is that the Agena rocket's engines have developed a fault, and it will not now be possible to use them to boost the two vehicles further into space as was planned. Major Aldrind is still going to walk in space, and they will still be able to carry on with original plan of photographing the eclipse of the sun, the first time this has been done from outside the earth's atmosphere.

RUSSIA. The Russians have denied that any off their submarines have been operating recently in Swedish and Norwegian territorial waters. A Soviet Navy spokesman, asked about reports of unidentified submarines being depth charged there, said that Soviet submarines always travel on the surface when passing through the straits between the Baltic and the North Sea.

FLORENCE The number of paintings damaged in the floods is now put at about 1,200, but only thirty are considered to be a total loss. The Italian Under-Secretary of Education said half the damaged works can be saved by long and careful restoration, and the remainder can be partly made good.

More rain has been falling in many parts of Italy as work goes on to repair the damage caused by the floods. In the Dolomite mountains, the inhabitants of a small town were moved to neighbouring villages as a gigantic mountain of mud and rock, loosened by the continuous rain, began to engulf their homes.

MORE NEWS.

ARGENTINA. An alleged Nazi war criminal, Dr. Gerhard Bonar, has been extradited from Argentina, and is now on his way to West Germany to stand trial. He was flown from Buenos Aires under a German police escort. Dr. Bonar, who is accused of murdering thousands of mentally and physically handicapped people, during the second world war, was arrested in Argentina two years ago at the request of the West German government.

SPAIN. The Spanish government has decreed an amnesty covering all political charges dating from the Spanish Civil War. Few people are believed to be still in prison for offences connected with the civil war, but many Spaniards who have "provisional liberty" will benefit from the amnesty.

NEWS ABOUT BRITAIN.

A Scottish ship-building yard has lost a contract worth £13 million because it could not guarantee delivery in the time required. The firm was saved from bankruptcy by the government last year, and several trade unions invested money in the yard to establish a working partnership of government, employers and unions. Announcing the failure to obtain the contract, the company's chairman Mr. Ian Stuart said that with productivity at its present level the yard could nor guarantee to complete the ship in less than five years, and a delivery period of four and a half years was required. Mr. Stuart told a mass meeting of shipyard workers that they must put productivity before wage claims, of the yard would become bankrupt.

Two British scientists say that a British drug which was already known to be effective against smallpox has now been proved capable of attacking viruses which cause more common diseases. The scientists say the drug, Marvoran, is effective against viruses causing diseases similar to the common cold and influenza. A leading British drug firm is more cautious; they say this property of Marvoran has not yet been tested on humans, and it might never prove useful against colds and influenza which are short-lived: but it might be used against an eye disease, conjunctivitis. Until recently it was believed that no chemical could attack viruses, but this discovery shows that man can develop chemical drugs to protect himself from virus diseases.

The stand-still on increases in pay is nearly over; it ends on December 31st, and next week the government will announce its policy for the following six months of 'severe wage restraint'. Reports suggest that pay rises will be mainly restricted to low-paid employees, and productivity agreements, but unions and other associations are already staking their claims for priority treatment. For instance, a member of Parliament who advises the Police Federation, Mr. Griffiths, has said that if the police do not receive an increase in March the rising pressure of discontent could reach bursting point. Mr. Griffiths said that already dissatisfaction with pay and conditions is causing thousands of policemen to resign. A further delay in pay rises could hinder the far-reaching reforms in police methods which are being planned.

Many parents of children who died in the Aberfan disaster have given clothes for the children of Florence, who have suffered in the flooding this week. An Aberfan father who lost his young daughter organised the collection of clothes in the village, and he is going to Italy in a small convoy of vehicles taking articles from all over Britain.

A company which is demolishing a 100 year old hospital near Southampton is having difficulty in finding night watchmen. Two night watchmen have quit and others have refused to take the job because they believe the hospital is haunted by the ghost of a nurse.

MORE NEWS ABOUT BRITAIN

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Callaghan, has told British industrialists to prepare now for the country's next period of expansion. He said that by investing in new plant and equipment they could be ready to take advantage of the expansion when it comes, whether or not Britain is in the European Common Market. Because of the government's economic measures, LABOUR IS BECOMING MORE FREELY AVAILABLE. Not all capital is being used fully, and there is more credit available for firms.

In the House of Commons there will be a two day debate on the European Common Market next Wednesday and Thursday. Concern over Britain's moves to get into the ECM has been expressed by the Prime Minister of New Zealand, Mr. Holyoak, but he welcomed Mr. Wilson's statement that New Zealand would be recognised as a special case.

250 workers at a car radiator factory are to return to work on Monday. They have been on strike for about three weeks in protest over 20 of their colleagues becoming redundant. The strike has brought production at BMC factories almost to a halt. A BMC spokesman says that production will be resumed next week, but because of the credit squeeze there will only be short time work for many people.

WEDNESDAY PARTY. IT WAS SUGGESTED DURING A RATHER DRUNKEN SESSION LAST NIGHT THAT THE NEXT PARTY BE A FANCY DRESS DO, AS THE ONE WE HAD FOR DICK KSS BIRTHDAY WAS SUCH A SUCCESS. ONE SUGGESTED THEME WAS ARABIAN DRESS, LATER AMENDED TO "ANY WOG GEAR". WHAT DO YOU THINK? THERE ISN'T MUCH TIME TO PREPARE FOR IT, BUT THERE PROBABLY ISN'T THE NEED FOR THE GREAT ARMOU ING SESSIONS THAT WENT INTO THE LAST ONE. SHEETS AND BLANKETS SHOULD SUFFICE FOR MOST TYPES OF DRESS, AS MOST OF THESE WOGS JUST SEEM TO WRAP A BIT OF CLOTH ROUND THEM AND LEAVE IT AT THAT.

THE TEAM THAT DIED OF SHAME.

It is not true that all boozers are rugby players, but it is true that all rugby players are boozers:

Away matches are good excusese to get together with a bunch of lads and take a coach on a gigantic binge. On some trips, which are a considerable distance from home a quiet hotel is found and the team stays for the week-end. The managers often look forward to a small group of gentlemen staying the week-end..... Needless to say they are seldom disappointed:

On Friday night fifteen rugby players, and a reserve who is a soccer player, arrive at the hotel... They carefully book in and noiselessly make their way to the bar to get some training in for the following day's match. Two hours and several pints later the small band retire to their beds.

Saturday morning, and the manager of the hotel has a few words with the Captain of the team.......

"But it wasn't our fault that the T.V. broke down.." Said the Captain, looking slightly worried.

"O.K. but it was one of your chaps that tried to repair it with a HAMMER! And what about the flowers that were eaten?"

"Well we had to have something to take that the taste of that foul beer away, anyway you should have had pies on or something!"

"We had pies on, and now they're on the B wall!"

"Well it gives the place a bit of atmoshere."

"And that's another thing, someone was sick in my wife's bed!"
"It wasn't me, I was sleeping with your daughter!"

"You'll be hearing from my solicitors about this, now you can get out!" The last words the poor manager hears as his guests leave are, "If you don't want our custom, ther're plenty of others hotels who will be glad of it...."

The match is played in the true blue spirit - Meths... The only casualty is the soccer player who was running touch... It seemed that he was chatting up this bird, who turned out to be the opposition's skipper's wife... Any way he is still in hospital... But he may well recover.

As there is no hotel to return to, the captain decides on an early start home, and arranges with the bus driver to pick them up at the club house at sixthirty... a.m. sorry p.m. The driver comes in for a cup of tea at eight O'clock, and by midnight both sides are laughing at the old crony who has done the "Muffin Man" on top of the piano; it is not until later that they realise that it is their bus driver:

Five thirty sunday morning police give chase to a coach through York, but they can't match the power and clever manoeuvres of the coach, and finally gave up when the coach takes a short - cut through a hedge and rejoins the road a mile or so further on.

Monday brings the team back to reality, the club committee want an explanation off the skipper, why did the team lose?

"I think it could be put down to something we drank ... or something????????????"

BEWARE....

FID on his return home may run into a young lady who has very obvious intentions towards him: her approach is simple and very effective, one that even FID will have no sure way out of, this young lady will try to buy FID.

How pleased FID is when he is with a girl who does not head for taxis, pause in front of flower stalls or gaze in every jeweller's window, not only does she ask nothing, but gives FID little presents.

A girl will find it difficult if not impossible to accept expensive presents from men, but a man usually finds it extremely difficult to phone up a girl, and say that he couldn't possibly accept a set of extension bellows for his camera. FID may respond to this type of treatment with boyish greediness: and take all that his young lady can give him and give her nothing in return. This type of treatment will not deter the girl in any way.

At each meeting FID's young lady will bring him a new surprise; FID can never see enough of her. All this leads up to the day when in answer to FIDs customery question, "What did you bring me?" She will snap open a little box inside of which there nestles an engagement ring. As a matter of habit FID will take it, with kisses of thanks, and only after she has clamped it on FIDs finger and ordered announcements of their betrothal does FID realize what has been done to him!

If FID is generous, he will try to match her present for present; caught in this give-and-take FID is led by imperceptible items from harmless souvenirs to an exchange of more incriminating items, until the day comes when he has no choice but to match her RING for RING!

Few men will take a horse from a girl and then not marry her. SO LOOK ALL GIFT HORSES IN THE MOUTH:

FID's only sure escape is to take all he can get except the ring, and run straight back to 30 Gillingham St.. and
