THIS WEEK'S WORLD NEWS

VIETNAM In an official statement in Washington on Wednesday, Mr. Moyers the White House Press Secretary announced that the United States had called a halt to bombing in the Eastern sector of the demilitarised zone between North and South Vietnam. The halt has been called to allow the International Control Commission to make an on-the-spot investigation of alleged violations in the zone of the 1954 Geneva Agreement. Mr. Moyers declined to link the suspension of bombing with any suggestion of a mutual scaling-down of the Vietnam war, and said that the United States is always agreeable to any indication that the other side wants peace.

At the United Nations, the Norwegian Foreign Minister urged a close examination of the peace offer by the permanent American representative, Mr. Goldberg, which said that the bombing of North Vietnam would cease if and when there were any indications of a possible approach from the other side.

The Canadian Prime Minister, Mr. Lester Pearson, said in Ottawa that Canada, who is a member of the Control Commission, has been working for full demilitarisation of the neutral zone.

Mr. Brown, the British Foreign Secretary, has put forward a new plan to bring an end to the war. His proposals are being examined in New York, and a UN spokesman says that the proposals appear to bridge the gap between U Thant's so far unsuccessful Three Point Plan and the more ruthless suggestions of Mr. Goldberg. Russian reactions to Mr. Brown's plan are reported to be rather cool, and Moscow Radio has said that he is simply echoing old American ideas, but the South Vietnamese government appears to be prepared to consider such outside views.

The Indonesian Foreign Minister has been asked by several countries on both sides to play an active role in helping to end the Vietnam war. He declined to name the countries, and said he was "thinking about it." Indonesia keeps diplomatic missions in both North and South Vietnam.

On Friday it was announced that the Americans had bombed part of the demilitarised zone again, but kept away from the eastern sector, which they want the Control Commission to inspect. The Commission says that the area is still not safe enough for them to go there.

More American troops have been landed in South Vietnam, bringing the total to more than a quarter of a million now stationed in the country. American marines have attacked and captured an important hill just south of the neutral zone. Heavy machine gun fire was encountered. More than 2,000 North Vietnamese and Vietcong have been killed or captured in a battle which has been raging in the central coastal lowlands. Over 600 square miles have been devastated by bombing and shellfire, and thousands have been left homeless.

A United States spokesman says that this week 99 American servicemen have been killed and 650 wounded. This is 43 less than last week, and the announcement was made before news of the latest battle.

NIGERIA Following the recent tribal disturbances in Nigeria, in which over 2,000 people have been killed, a large scale evacuation of minor tribal groups is being carried out. It is being done with the help and ~~and~~ co-operation of the government, and latest reports say that all is going well. The Red Cross in Lagos say that the transfer should be completed by the weekend. The head of the military government says that he has not lost all hope of holding the country together, but the Military Governor of the Western Region says that the country is beginning to disintegrate.

BRIGHTON: THE LABOUR PARTY CONFERENCE

At the Labour Party Conference at Brighton, approval was given to the report of the party's National Executive, concerning the recent economic measures, including the freeze on wages and prices, in spite of strong opposition from the largest of the trade unions, the Transport Workers Union. However, immediately after this acceptance, two other resolutions were passed which expressed disapproval of the government's defence and overseas policies. One called for cuts in defence expenditure, especially in West Germany and East of Suez, the other called on the government to do what it could to end the war in Vietnam. The conference endorsed the government's policy on Rhodesia by an overwhelming majority. The Transport Workers Union gained majority support for their resolution which expressed grave concern at the sharp rise in unemployment, especially in the motor industry, and insisted on the principle of short time working and work sharing, as an alternative to dismissal while redundancies are being planned. Mr. Frank Cousins, who resigned from the government because of its economic policies, and is now leader of the Transport and General Workers Union, called the freeze "a step towards totalitarianism."

In a speech by the Foreign Secretary Mr. George Brown, he announced his plan to end the Vietnam war. The plan calls for an immediate conference of all the parties involved, including the Vietcong if necessary, to try to get a political settlement based on the 1954 Geneva Agreement. As soon as it is agreed that the conference should take place, the Americans must stop bombing in North Vietnam; no new military activities should be started, and the build-up of supplies in South Vietnam should also stop. The plan also provides for free elections, the evacuation of foreign troops, and economic rehabilitation under international control. Mr. Brown said he would be seeing Mr. Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign Minister, at the United Nations next week, and would make a personal appeal to the Soviet Union to join him in re-convening the Geneva Conference, of which Britain and the Soviet Union are co-Chairmen.

INDONESIA. Former Foreign Minister Dr. Subandrio has finished giving evidence at his trial for treason in Jakarta. He was under cross-examination for sixteen hours, and said that the evidence which supported his claim of a British-American plot against Indonesia was an unsigned document which he alleged had been written by a former British ambassador.

A report from Jakarta today states that more than a thousand armed troops have sealed off a wide area around the palace of President Sukarno, after rumours that students were planning another demonstration.

This week is the first anniversary of the attempted communist coup in Indonesia. In Jakarta students have been rioting, and there have been violent scenes between them and the army. The trial of President Sukarno's former Foreign Minister has started in the capital, and some foreign commentators believe that this is the beginning of the end for Sukarno, and that he will very soon be deposed. This conclusion is obviously based on a false interpretation of the internal situation in Indonesia. It is quite apparent that the military government doesn't really want to sack Sukarno; they are quite happy to let him continue in office as long as he realises that he no longer has any say in official matters; he is now only a figurehead. Forcible removal of him would almost certainly lead to civil war in the country; Sukarno has many powerful friends, some of them in high positions in the armed forces. His main strength, however, lies in the love and respect which the people of the country have for him; to them he is the founder of their nation, who made Indonesia important in the eyes of the world. Because of this adulation he could easily lead them into the sort of disaster which would only show in economic statistics. General Sukarto, the Prime Minister, wants to use Sukarno's popularity to get co-operation from the people to save the country from economic collapse, while at the same time trying to ease him gently out of power. He certainly has no power nowadays to make policy decisions; often he says one thing in public while the government does something else behind his back. The trials of some of his principal ministers are intended to build up doubts about him in the eyes of the people and bring pressure to bear upon him where it hurts most - his popularity, thus making him retire from office of his own free will without making him a martyr. It has been said that if Sukarno had put as much energy into saving his country as he did in founding it, Indonesia's future would be assured.

Almost 500 Indonesian troops, captured in Malaysia during the confrontation campaign, are being sent home. A special train collected them from various detention camps in Southern Malaya, and there was a short ceremony when they boarded an Indonesian ship for the homeward journey. 50 others, mostly illegal immigrants, were also sent with them.

GIBRALTAR. Britain has protested strongly to Spain over the decision to reduce Customs facilities at their post on the Gibraltar border, which is expected to mean a complete ban on all vehicles crossing the border. The British government takes a very serious view of the action, especially in view of the fact that the talks on the future of Gibraltar are due to resume in London on Monday. The Spanish ambassador in London has been called to the Foreign Office for talks with officials there, and it has been proposed that the dispute should be referred to the International Court of Justice at The Hague. Latest reports say that this has been very well received in Gibraltar, and a correspondent says that the people "remain united in their determination to stay British". From Madrid, it is reported that there is "indignation, and an atmosphere of strong emotion over the issue".

CONGO. The Congolese government has broken off diplomatic relations with Portugal, and has ordered the closing of all foreign embassies outside Kinshasa, the capital. The government has accused Portugal of allowing the neighbouring territory of Angola to be used as a base for mercenaries in the pay of the former Prime Minister, Mr. Tshombe. The allegation has been denied by both Mr. Tshombe and Portugal, and both sides have had separate talks with the British delegate to the United Nations, who is this month's Security Council President.

UNITED STATES. President Johnson is to make an extensive tour of the Far East before and after the seven nation conference on Vietnam, due to start in the Philippines on October 24th. During the two week tour, he will visit Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, Malaysia, and South Korea. There are so far no plans for him to include South Vietnam in the tour.

There has been a favourable reaction in European capitals to President Johnson's speech calling for improved East-West relations. He calls for a balanced reduction of all American and Russian troops in Europe, and announced that hundreds of items are to be taken off the list of goods banned from export to European Communist countries.

In Dallas, the Court of Criminal Appeal has quashed the conviction of Jack Ruby, for the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald, imposed by the Dallas Court. It was done on two grounds: The court should have allowed the trial to take place in another county, as all the Dallas jurors were bound to be prejudiced one way or the other; The improper admission by the trial judge of an oral confession by Ruby that he made after his arrest. The police said that he had told them that he had seen Oswald with a sneer on his face at an identification parade, and had decided there and then to kill him. The Court of Appeal ruled that this was obviously an injurious statement, and called for a reversal. A re-trial has been ordered to take place in another county. The District Attorney of Dallas, who prosecuted Ruby, is to make an appeal.

SWEDEN. A Swedish helicopter dropped depth charges near an unidentified submarine inside territorial waters during Swedish Naval manoeuvres. The submarine sailed out to sea without surfacing. Officials said that the nationality of the submarine was unknown to them, but they could "make a pretty good guess".

GERMANY. In Bonn, the West German Chancellor Dr. Erhardt has told Parliament about his recent visit to Washington. His speech earned only mild applause, which warmed slightly when he said that West Germany should continue to work in close co-operation with France. On the subject of covering the cost in Marks of the stationing of American troops in West Germany, he said he had put forward the proposal in Washington. West Germany would do its best, with the co-operation of the Federal Bank, to fulfil its obligation to cover the costs up to the sum of nearly $500 million, over the next two years ending next June, but must be granted certain delays in paying the whole. President Johnson and he had agreed that long term defence planning for NATO should be gone into at the three-power talks, as well as the cost of troops in Germany, and that all NATO members should take part in solving the problems to be discussed there. He raised some applause when he said that any disarmament agreement must guarantee German security.

A British citizen who was jailed in East Germany last November for trying to help East Germans to escape through the Berlin Wall to the West has been released and is now back in Britain, having served less than a year of his four-year sentence. His release follows a plea for clemency by his lawyer.

A coachload of Yugoslavians on their way to a photographic exhibition in West Germany are reported to have decided to stay in the West. All 34 passengers left the coach at Munich, and the driver of the coach made the return journey alone.

Special passes will once again be issued for emergency journeys between the Eastern and Western sectors of Berlin. The agreement to re-open the passes office, which has been closed since last June, was signed last Thursday. The passes are normally used in cases of illness and death.

Four East German youths have tunneled their way to freedom during a power cut which blacked out the border searchlights. The youths say they knew there was going to be a power cut, so they dug their way under three barbed wire fences dividing East Germany from the British sector of Berlin.

RUSSIA One of the largest volcanoes in the world, Klyuchevskaya Sopka (15913ft) has erupted in Russia. The volcano, which is on the Kamchatka peninsula, has a crack over half a mile wide in the side of its crater, and experts have left Moscow to examine it. The area is very sparsely populated.

The Soviet Union has produced a revised draft treaty on space exploration for consideration by the United Nations General Assembly. It includes proposals that spaceships and installations on the moon and "other celestial bodies" should be open for inspection by other parties to the treaty, and suggests that all results of space research should be published. So far the United States and the Soviet have failed to resolve their differences over space proposals.

VIENNA Franz Novak, a former assistant to Adolf Eichmann, has been acquitted in Vienna by a special court of war crimes against the Jews. He had already been found guilty on similar charges two years ago, and sentenced to eight years imprisonment, but the sentence was laid aside by a higher court and a re-trial ordered. At the second trial the jury found by a large majority that Novak had arranged large consignments of Jews for concentration camps, but were equally divided as to whether he could legally have resisted orders from higher authority. In such a case the defendant receives the benefit of the doubt.

YUGOSLAVIA. President Tito has said that his former deputy, who was deposed recently, had created a "personality cult" which was a threat to the country and the Yugoslav Communist Party, and new reforms had made imitation of him impossible by separating the State from the Party. He warned Yugoslavs to be on guard against negative elements both at home and abroad.

PARIS The Paris Motor Show opened on Thursday. British manufacturers have more cars on show than any other country, with 31 different makes compared with 17 from Germany and the United States, and 16 from France. Among the British cars are the new Hillman Hunter saloon, a sports version of the Imp, Vauxhall's new Viva model, and the JT6 Triumph.

ISRAEL. In the Lebanon, a commission has proposed that they jam Israel's new television service when it goes on the air. They say it would represent a competitor to the Lebanese television service. At the moment Israel is broadcasting educational programmes from the Israel side of the city of Jerusalem, and these are not being jammed. Israel has just signed an agreement with the American network CBS, for the establishment of a nationwide television service, and at least two of the stations would be capable of being received in the neighbouring Arab countries of Lebanon and Jordan.

BRITISH COLUMBIA A plan has been announced by the President of British Columbia to build a sea-level canal between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, through British Columbia, as an alternative to the Panama Canal. It is to take ships of up to 20,000 tons, and technical assistance is expected to come from France.

GENEVA. The Executive Committee of the League of Red Cross Societies in Geneva has been told that the organisation is facing a severe financial crisis. The League's Secretary-General said that while the tasks of the movement were continually increasing, they were running into grave difficulties in carrying out the development programme for building new National Societies. Expansion of their activities was straining their resources and inflation in Switzerland was responsible for a large increase in the operating costs of the League Headquarters. They are now faced with a deficit of $20,000 on this year's budget, and next year would be much greater. If there were no increase in income, the league would soon use up its cash reserves built over a long period of years.

URUGUAY The Uruguayan government has ordered two East German Trade Officials to leave the country. Three days ago four members of the Soviet Embassy were ordered to leave; they were alleged to have interfered in labour disputes. This brings the total of expulsions this month up to sixteen.

GHANA Speaking in London recently, the commanding officer of the Ghanaian armed forces said that ex-President Nkrumah is trying to subvert the present government. According to information reaching Accra, he said, Nkrumah is training subversive groups in Guinea, where he now lives. He added that Ghana would be raising the matter with the United Nations, and with the Organisation for African Unity if necessary.

ADEN The Secretary-General of the UMAH party in Aden has been murdered. He was shot in the back as he sat in a cafe. He had been involved in a controversy over a statement he is alleged to have made in the Egyptian Press, about a possible merger of his party with the Anti-British Liberation Front.

The President of the Yemeni Republic has accused Saudi Arabia of not wanting any agreement on the Yemen that would allow the Republican regime to continue. In an exclusive interview he said the Egyptians will remain in the Yemen until threats to the republic come to an end. As for the South Arabian Federation, he re-iterates his belief that the Anti-British Liberation Front is the only true representative of the people.

INDIA. Two people were killed and at least twelve injured when police opened fire on rioting students in Dehra Dun, 130 miles north-east of Delhi. About six people have died in the current wave of student rioting in India.

The British Minister for Disarmament, Lord Chalfont, has arrived in Delhi for talks with the Prime Minister, Mrs. Gandhi. They are to discuss developments at the Geneva disarmament conference, and arms control, today. Mrs. Gandhi, on her way home from Nepal, said at a press conference in Katmandhu that India is committed to protect Bhutan province. India protested to China earlier in the week over alleged incursions into Bhutan territory.

The American unmanned spacecraft Surveyor 1, which landed safely on the moon, has come back to life again after four months silence. American scientists say they lost contact with it a few days after it had transmitted to Earth over 11,000 pictures of the moon's surface. Faint signals have now been heard again, and a spokesman says that efforts will be made to obtain further pictures, although the chances of success were doubtful.

President Johnson has appointed Mr. Llewellyn Thompson to return to Moscow as American Ambassador to the Soviet Union. Mr. Thompson served as ambassador previously for five years until 1961.

2,000 people are unofficially estimated to have been killed during a hurricane which hit the coast and off-shore islands of East Pakistan last weekend.

The Yemeni Republican army has been purged of over fifty of its senior officers. They include the military commanders of four provinces, and the Commanding Officers of the four main army divisions. Most of them are well-known supporters of the former Premier.

NEWS ABOUT BRITAIN.

The Clyde Port Authority announced its plans for a new deep-water terminal to be built at Greenock. It will cost about $2million, and will be specially designed to handle cargo from container ships. It is expected to be completed by 1969. The Chairman of the authority says that British shipowners will probably order container ships in the near future, and with their new equipment it will be possible to load or discharge cargo at the rate of 5,000 tons in 24 hours. By conventional methods it would take more than a week.

The Royal County Show will not be in its usual form next year, due to the economic squeeze. Instead, it will be held in conjunction with Agricultural Societies in Kent and Sussex. The Royal County Society has had talks with the two other societies with a view to forming a new organisation, the Southern England Agricultural Society.

There are now two cars on the Channel Island of Sark, which normally prohibits motor vehicles of any kind. The island's Parliament agreed that an elderly man who is partially paralysed can import an electric invalid car. Previously, the only other car on the island belonged to the owner, Dame Sybil Hathaway, and even she needed special permission. Future applicants must have a doctor's certificate as well as the usual third party insurance.

An exhibition of paintings, books, and handicrafts by prisoners in British prisons has opened in London. One man, serving a long sentence at Wandsworth has already received an advance payment of over £1,000 for a book he wrote about his experiences during the war, at Arnhem in Holland.

"The Times", the Top Paper, has been taken over by a Canadian newspaper combine, Thompson Newspapers.

Air Commodore Sir Frank Whittle, who developed Britain's first jet engine, has been honoured by the Italian National Research Council. He has been presented with the 1966 Christopher Columbus Award.

Five Germans in a balloon landed in a cabbage field near Shepperton, Middlesex, after setting out from the Sussex coast in a bid to cross the English Channel. They are members of the German Balloon Club, and came to Britain three weeks ago to make the attempt. Soon after they set out they were warned by radio that they were towards London Airport, so they opened the air valve and descended into the cabbages.

The Bristol Coroner's Court was told yesterday that a police scientist was killed by an explosion while preparing to demonstrate how criminals inject plastic explosive into the keyholes of safes with a grease gun. The explosion wrecked the forensic laboratory. The coroner said the demonstration was unwise.

The town council of Oldham has been accused of being ignorant of modern art because it decided not to buy a sculpture by Dame Barbara Hepworth valued at about £8,000. It had been offered to the council at a third of this price. One councillor said it looked like "the back view of Yogi Bear". Another said that if the sculpture were bought he would drop it in the nearest reservoir.

The Annual Report of the Atomic Energy Authority announced that they would be cutting down on research and development work over the next few years. Britain has the largest civilian nuclear electricity programme in the world, and their ATR reactor is the first to produce electricity cheaper than oil or coal. The cut is nothing to do with the government's squeeze, it was simply due to the success of their research workers.

John Thompson, a Wolverhampton firm, has obtained a major export order from Australia. The order is worth £18 million, and is for two boilers for a large power station just outside Melbourne. It is the largest generating station in Australia, and Thompson's have made a total of 38 boilers for them in the past 45 years. This one will be the biggest so far, and will be about 300 feet tall.

LATE ITEMS:

At least twenty Canadian teenagers have been killed and many others injured when their bus was hit by a train on a level crossing near Montreal. They were on their way to a dance when the bus was hit, and it burst into flames. Wreckage was hurled for hundreds of yards along the railway track.

Nearly 30 horses taking part in an equestrian marathon in South Africa have died. Veterinary experts say they died from nitrate poisoning, and they are still searching for the source of the poison. They stress that none of the horses died as a result of over-exertion.

SPOTLIGHT

This Week :- "THE BATTLE OF THE FALKLANDS 1966"

The full story of the Argentinian invasion of the British Protectorate as pieced together from eye witness accounts and on-the-spot reports from our correspondents.

It was on Wednesday 28th September that news first penetrated the radio link of an alleged 'invasion' by Argentinian Nationalist Extremists on the British Colony of the Falkland Islands. It appears that 16 party members, led by a woman, who's identity remains unknown (though unconfirmed reports state that it was in fact Honnor Blackman disguised as an Argentinian), kidnapped the Argentinian Minister of Defense, drove to Buenos Aires airport and at gunpoint demanded an aeroplane. Being Latin American and lethargical by nature the airport officials saw nothing extraordinary about this at all, and so a DC-4 was laid on for them with the minimum of fuss and bother. In this plane (pilot provided by the company) the rebels flew to the Falklands where they landed (somewhat precariously) on the Port Stanley Race Course, much to the consternation of the locals (it's race day on Monday). The Argentinian flag was run up on a makeshift pole and the rebels prepared to repel boarders to the death. Undaunted by this, however, The Falkland Island Defense Corps had rallied to the cause of liberty and threw a cordon around the plane, covering it with Bren guns and small arms. And this is how the situation remained for 24 hours, except that the kidnapped official was released in the evening and escorted by FIDC members to Government House where he took up temporary residence (much to the embarrassment of the governor). By this time the news had leaked to the outside world and a rapid exchange of diplomatic notes ensued between the British and Argentinian Governments. However the British were unfortunate in that the Duke of Edinburgh was on a state visit to Argentina at the time. The Argentinian population took the rebels plight to heart and Anti-British demonstrations were soon in full swing outside the British Embassy, where the Duke was in residence, disrupting the administration and breaking many windows. Britain demanded that Argentina remove the rebels and forthwith despatched a warship posthaste to Stanley to see that Her wishes were fulfilled. However, by this time the rebels had become cheesed off with being confined in the aircraft and had slipped through the FIDC cordon and lodged themselves in the church where they beat off all attackers with small arm and machine gun fire. The Argentinian government then washed their hands of the whole affair and left the rebels to their fate. The British battleship arrived off Port Stanley the following Morning after a record breaking journey from Cape Farewell where it had been doing manoeuvres with a Grimsby Trawler. Though experiencing slight difficulty in navigating the Narrows the warship was finally successful in anchoring its 75,000 tons in Stanley harbour. Unfortunately its displacement was such that the water level in Stanley rose twenty feet above that normal at high water, completely flooding the church (and most of the town), and after a hurried discussion the now rather bedraggled and waterlogged rebels surrendered to the local police force who immediately placed them under armed guard aboard the RRMX RMS "Darwin" which sailed for Montevideo on the same time. The Argentinian Minister was transferred to the battleship which conveyed him to Buenos Aires in fine style, so that he and the rebels arrived back in Argentina together - the rebels to be given a Heroes welcome, and the Minister to cry of "Resign" and the like.

The warship silently cast off to head back to the northern fishing grounds, the Darwin returned to Montevideo only to find that in the excitement she had forgotten to off-load the mail for the bases (hence no airletters) and all that remains of this proudly patriotic uprising is a rather battered and bedraggled DC-4 lying forlornly in the mud of Stanley racecourse, presumably to end its days as a steeplechase hurdle, and an immortal monument to the futility of war.

if FID on his return to the U.K. finds himself travelling to another town and staying on in the evening to go to a dance; dances are O'K, but there is a possibility that there will be one young lady there who fancies FID. She will see that FID is all alone and go across and keep him company; after a few dances she will explain that she has to return home early, FID will see her home and as he kisses her good night and goodby, she will persuade him to tell her his address: this lure only works if she is a real good looker.

A day or so after FID arrives home he will receive a letter from her in which she asks him to ring her at once, no reason is given. FID will ~~think~~ ring her later on in the evening, and will be told that it is imperative that he should come down to her home and stay the week-end!

At this stage it is impossible to persuade him against going, besides FID will think that there is a chance to do something that he shouldn't, any way she said it was important.....

Come Friday night FID arrives and is shown to his room, and later on is introduced to Mummy and Daddy, and shortly afterwards it is time for bed. In the morning she will wake FID up with a cup of tea, she will be wearing only a night dress and will explain that as this is her room the clothes that she wants to wear are in the wardrobe.... FID will try to be amorous, but as soon as he thinks that he is getting somewhere she will say, "No... Not until we get one of those certificates from the Registry Office!" And after a short while she will say, "I think that I hear Mummy getting up!" With that there is no alternative but to let her go and get dressed.

Throughout the day she will refuse to tell FID why she asked him down for the week-end. In the evening she will suggest that they go out for a meal; at the meal she will take the initiative and start the conversation, and it may go something like this.....

"Darling.... the first time that I saw you I knew that you were the only man for me....And... Oh Darling.... I know I shouldn't say this.... but I want you!"

"You mean....."

"Yes Darling..... MARRIAGE.....!"

Don't bother to collect your things at her place, just get to 30, Gillingham St, S.W.1. as soon as you can and.....
